Design crime: back to the future or forwards to the past?
Rethinking what international patenting really says about Chinese innovation
Protecting incremental invention in India
Alligators, crocodiles and cutlasses: trade mark infringement in Guyana
Copyright exceptions for the digital age: new rights of private copying, parody and quotation
The Apple store and unconventional trade marks: how easy are they to enforce?
From GRUR Int: The Guidelines on technology transfer agreements: the second edition and its consequences on patent pools
From GRUR Int: Drospirenon and Damping Unit: lifesaver for a German doctrine of equivalents or very old wine in new skins?

Includes content from

GRUR Int
Gewerblicher Rechtsschutz und Urheberrecht
Internationaler Teil

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS
Contents

Guest editorial
Federalism and localisation in intellectual property law-making
Phillip Johnson ................................................. 949

Current Intelligence
Stem cell patents: limiting the application of Bristle?
Christopher Hayes ........................................... 951

Assessing damages for unjustified threats of patent infringement
Paul England .................................................. 952

US Supreme Court: no induced patent infringement without direct infringement
Charles R. Macedo, Reena Jain, and Michael Sebba .... 954

How is patent eligibility of computer-implemented inventions to be determined in the United States in view of Alice v CLS Bank?
Susan Keston .................................................. 956

Three colours red? CJEU rules on contourless colour trade marks
Birgit Clark ................................................... 958

The registered layout: a new type of trade mark for Apple
Tristan Sherliker .............................................. 961

David versus Goliath chocolate trade mark dispute: does size count when applying the concept of genuine use?
Valentina Torelli .............................................. 963

Argentine court validates first claim of ambush marketing
Pablo A. Palazzi and Marco Rizzo Jurado ................. 965

The Italian Supreme Court confirms that it is upon resellers to prove lawful importation of trade marked products into the EU
Michele Giannino ............................................. 966

The autonomous concept of parody and conflicting fundamental rights: a balancing act
Carina Gommers ............................................. 968

Developing a P2P program is not punished under Spanish law . . . yet
Michel Olmedo Cuevas ..................................... 970

High Court of Ireland clarifies correct approach to assessing an account of profits for passing off cases
Joel Smith, Victoria Horsey, and Emily Bottle ........... 972

Does Allah belong exclusively to Islam?
Jesús Iván Mora González .................................. 974

Festive Feature
Design crime: back to the future or forwards to the past?
David Musker ................................................ 976

Articles
Rethinking what international patenting really says about Chinese innovation
Dan Prud'homme ............................................. 986

Protecting incremental invention in India
Ganesan Subramaniam and Deepa Datvasigamani .... 993

Alligators, crocodiles and cutlasses: trade mark infringement in Guyana
Don Arp, Jr. .................................................... 999

Copyright exceptions for the digital age: new rights of private copying, parody and quotation
Alec Cameron ............................................... 1002

The Apple store and unconventional trade marks: how easy are they to enforce?
Jeremy Blum and Amy Cullen ................................ 1008
From GRUR Int.

The Guidelines on technology transfer agreements: the second edition and its consequences on patent pools
Martin Königs ........................................ 1012

Drospirenone and Damping Unit: lifesaver for a German doctrine of equivalents or very old wine in new skins?
Daniel Hoppe-Jänisch and Bijal V. Vakil ........... 1017

IP in Review

One size does not fit all
Jay Sanderson ....................................... 1023

Copyright meets the digital revolution
Francis Davey ........................................ 1024